

"DO A THAW!" NOW THE PRRAISE.

It is the Up-to-Snuff Substitute for "Beat It!" "Blow!" and Other Delicate Hints to Begone!—By Gene Morgan.

No longer "Beat It!" rules the roost. As one of slangdom's capers—Nor "rause" nor "vamp" nor "breeze" nor "blow" nor "Go and sell your papers!" But up to date, without a flaw, And tell your foes: "GO DO A THAW!"

out of the Mattawan detention parlor he at least conferred one favor on our ever-worked and pallid vernacular.

For some time past the list of expressions signifying the verb "to depart" have been seedy and frazzled. But the day after the distinguished star boarder at Mattawan made his spectacular escape wise ones everywhere seized upon the chance to enrich the United States language with a forcible term.

When the dictionary is eventually revised so that Lord Ballyrot and other visitors can translate our speech, the following item will appear:

"Thaw"—v. l. 1.—To melt.
2.—To begone; to blow; to exit; to breeze while the weather is good; to oar out; to ooze forth from the joint; to put an egg in one's shoe and beat it; to float while the tide is in; to scatter; to make oneself scarce; to mosh; to lammus; to follow one's nose; to see a party; to slip while its soapy; to steam out.
School children of the next generation may feel the need of some examples of the use of the new verb, in addition to the lucid chatter above. So in behalf of higher education we hand out the following test cases in which "Thaw" may be used to advantage:

"Wake up and do a Thaw, you big hobo. This park ain't no hotel."
"I won't quit my job, Mr. Jones, and if you don't Thaw out of this kitchen I'll brain ye with a poker."
"It's 11 o'clock, Jessamine, and if that young man caller doesn't Thaw I'm going to put on my hobnailed shoes."
"Heinie pelted a three-bagger and Jerry did a Thaw for the home platter."
"Really Mrs. Squinch, I must be Thawing. It's 5 o'clock and I've got to get dinner ready."
"Say youse, Thaw while the sun is up!"

Perhaps no episode in American criminal history has furnished so many gems of speech for general conversation as the Thaw case. Every one remembers "brain storm," and it is still giving good service, with comparatively small bills for repairs. Then there was "Dementia Americana," a bit of lawyer's hog Latin which surely bruised the nail on the head.

But, say, let's forget this Thaw case! I'm tired of it, aren't you? Let's do a THAW to the ball game!

MAY INCREASE REWARD FOR MISSING CASHIER

Shortage of Raymond E. Smith of Newark Now Placed at $358,000.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 20.—It was said that the $100,000 offered for the arrest of Raymond E. Smith, missing cashier secretary and treasurer of the looted Roseville Trust company, would be increased when the report of the examiners made public Tuesday showed that Smith's shortage is now placed at $358,000.

The report of the state banking officials was a severe blow to the bank directors who had been led to believe that the institution's resources were intact and that $100,000 would place it on its feet and enable them to pay off all depositors.

Smith disappeared last Wednesday and for a time detectives of the National Surety company claimed to have him under surveillance, but did not arrest him because no warrant for his arrest had been issued. When finally a criminal complaint was made on Monday, Smith had disappeared.

PYMOUTH.

At the time when lightning struck the barn on the Schaefer place Sunday night, there were none of the family at home. Fred Andrew is the tenant and was with his family at a reunion near Columbia City. The corn crib and grain storage places, besides the barn, were all burned.
